

AN ETERNAL INSTANT.

A moment in time that refuses to die,
A memory that last to the sweet bye and bye,
There's no way to forget it, it's with you to stay,
The memory of something that happened one day.

Something so precious, it's yours, all your own,
You carry it close in your heart all year round,
A secret that really you can't share with others,
Only you and God know it, not sisters or brothers.

In the Bible we read of Abraham of old,
As he pleaded for Sodom, his faith was so bold,
"Lord if there's ten faithful," he was heard to inquire,
"Will you destroy Sodom with a judgment by fire?"

That day when Noah pushed open the door,
Of his houseboat that served as a stable and more,
He breathed the fresh air, looked at the blue sky,
A moment to savor as his heart raced with joy.

A moment in time, as the shepherds did bow,
While a young mother looked at her baby and now,
Even though still a mystery, it's of God she was sure,
Of this moment in time, this instant so pure.
